

MEDICAL TOURISM IN ANKARA

Ankara, the capital of Turkey, has a great potential for health tourism with its strong healthcare infrastructure, high quality facilities and mineral-rich thermal springs. 58 public hospitals and 33 private hospitals located in Ankara provide high-technology medical services through their strong infrastructure and highly qualified personnel. The fact that 112 emergency call number and almost all of outstanding hospitals of Ankara offer translation services in commonly spoken languages such as English, Arabic and Russian provides a convenience for international patients. The hospitals of Ankara offer more affordable high standard medical services especially compared to the Western counterparts.

Ankara, where thermal springs meet with high quality facilities, provides thermal tourism services spread throughout the year. Ankara's thermal sources spring from several counties such as Ayaş, Haymana, Beypazarı, Çamlıdere ve Kızılcahamam. 22 thermal facilities located in the counties, which have thermal springs, provide their guests with quality accommodation and recreation services as well as the opportunity to enjoy thermal sources.

JCI ACCREDITATION AND ANKARA HOSPITALS

Joint Commission International (JCI) is a division of Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) aiming to improve quality and reliability of healthcare. It is established to provide international accreditation services. There are 47 JCI-accredited healthcare organizations in Turkey. The current list of JCI-accredited health organisations around the world is accessible on the official website of the JCI, www.jointcommissioninternational.org. Accreditation by the JCI set international standards for healthcare organizations while it brings prestige to internationally competitive healthcare organizations. The standards of the JCI are divided into two main sections as patient-centered care and health care organization management.

Patient-Centered Standards

- ▶ Access to care and continuity of care
- ▶ Patient and family rights
- ▶ Assessment of patients
- ▶ Care of patients
- ▶ Patient and Family Education

Health Care Organization Management Standards

- ▶ Quality improvement and patient safety
- ▶ Prevention and Control of Infections
- ▶ Governance, leadership, and direction
- ▶ Facility management and safety
- ▶ Staff qualifications and education
- ▶ Management of information

JCI Accreditation

- ▶ Increases credibility of healthcare organizations by assuring that care and treatment are performed at international standards
- ▶ Ensures effective use of resources
- ▶ Supports the development of integrated and patient-focused management
- ▶ Improves professional development and credibility.
